Don't Hold Floods,

Nor Do Small Dams

Kenneth Ambrose, president of Hope Chamber of Commerce, Mayor John L. Wilson, and your editor returned home late Tuesday afternoon after attending the two-day annual convention of the Red River Valley association in Shreveport.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Peck and Vincent Foster also were present on Monday, but the rest of us stayed to the final luncheon meeting Tuesday afternoon when Brig. Gen. E. C. Itchner, new Assistant Chief of Engineers for Civil Works, whom Ambrose and I had met in Washington March 2, was the speaker.

I interrupt my report at this point to acknowledge receipt of a challenge by Editor Louis Graves in the Nashville News of April 20 to a wheelbarrow-pushing business — I ride and Louis pushes, if Millwood Dam and Reservoir are built; Louis rides and I push, if it isn't built.

The challenge is respectfully acknowledged — and rejected.

The fact is, if the two of us pushed, everybody would get a ride. And Gen. Itchner said something very much like that when he spoke specifically of Millwood in his luncheon address Tuesday afternoon. He said that the Corps of Engineers has virtually completed plans and specifications for the Spry's Bridge Reservoir in east Texas, where the people are united behind their project, and is making a further study of Millwood "in the hope of unifying diverse groups."

Gen. Itchner was introduced by Senator Russell B. Long of Louisiana, who recalled that the general had made a great name for himself while a colonel in handling the most difficult engineering jobs in Europe in World War II, and lately in Korea. This fact makes the next paragraph doubly important —

Gen. Itchner said the theory that you can control floods with a series of small dams is nice — but it won't hold water. He said he saw the principle illustrated many times in the terraced rice paddies of Korea when they were swept by prolonged rains. "When you poured a bucket of water on the top terrace you got a bucket of water in the bottom paddy, too — and a flood."

But Millwood was only a small part of the Red River Valley Association convention, and, like all engineering problems, is something that the technical men will finally handle.

The great meeting of water-conservation men had things to talk about which concern our whole region. For instance, Elmer D.anner, executive director of Louisiana's State Department of Commerce and Industry, said:

"We have a critical shortage in America, and it's easily explained: While our population has increased 300 per cent the demand for water has increased 7,000 per cent!"

We heard many speeches the past two days, and you know they must have been good when I tell you our delegation listened to every one of them either wholly or in part. Some of them will be discussed in later editions.

They would have interested most of our local citizens. And I think in the future a lot of Hope men should find time to attend the Red River Valley meetings. Attendance from this area is notably sparse compared to the interest shown by Louisiana and Texas towns. Neighboring Texarkana had just gone through the exhausting job of dedicating the big dam and reservoir on Sulphur river over the week-end, yet both Texarkana mayors, Carroll L. Shiffer of the Texas side, and Haskell C. Hay of the Arkansas side, were in Shreveport two full days.

So were Louisiana congressional delegation, and Oren Harris of the Fourth Arkansas District.

Of course there were some minor hazards. When we came out of the hotel to start home late Tuesday we discovered my car had a flat. And then, when I got home, there was Louis Graves' challenge to hard labor. But it disturbed me not. Wrote this report, and so home to bed.

New Funeral Home, Chapel to Open Here

A new funeral home and chapel will open in Hope about July 1st, it was learned today.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in Little Rock with the Secretary of State which show that the new firm will be known as "Oakcrest Mortuary & Chapel, Inc."

Original incorporators were listed as Don L. Westbrook, presently of Texarkana, B. W. Edwards, John B. Lowe, and James H. Pilkinton, all of Hope. A spokesman for the group said today that there would be other stockholders, and that practically all the stock of the corporation would be owned by Hope people.

Location of the new chapel will be at 302 East Second Street, the site formerly occupied and used by the Presbyterian Church. The present buildings will be completely remodeled into a modern mortuary and chapel.

Mr. Westbrook will be president and general manager of the new firm. He is a former Hope resident, and is the son of Mr. & Mrs. S. A. Westbrook of this city. At the present time Westbrook is employed by a Texarkana funeral home, but will move to Hope with his wife and son in June.

"We plan to give Hope one of the best chapels in the state," Mr. Westbrook said today. "My wife and I have wanted to return home for sometime, and are delighted that we now have an opportunity to do so."

Mrs. Westbrook is the former Melba Kimberly of Hope.

Texarkanian Named Red River Official

SHREVEPORT — B. R. McCarty of Texarkana yesterday was elected Arkansas executive vice president of the Red River Valley Improvement Association.

It urged an appropriation of at least one billion dollars yearly for similar work in this country.

City, W&L Plant Financial Report Heard; Urges Bond Retirement Ahead of Schedule

Finance was the topic of discussion at last night's regular city council meeting with most of the time being spent in going over audits of the Water and Light Plant and the City of Hope operations.

Robert Jewell, former Hope man and member of the auditing firm, discussed the audits with the group and made recommendations. This was followed by a general discussion.

Makes Suggestions

Mr. Jewell told the group the city was in much better shape financially than it was a year ago. He attributed a decline in profit at the Water and Light plant to larger meter deposits being required, encouraged approval of purchases by the proper committees and departments and suggested the city look into liability insurance on equipment.

Profit Down

The audit showed that the income for the City of Hope during 1953 was $245,731 but the city spent $249,617. The Water and Light plant gross was 401,427 showing a net profit of $189,947. Of this net profit $107,922 was taken by the city.

Bonds Aired

Syd McMath, veteran member of the Board of Public Affairs and another member Haskell Jones brought up the two bonding issues which has the city in debt by nearly a half million dollars. They discussed the bond retirement which will cost the city some $28,000 a year and recommended cutting expenditures and paying off the bonds as soon as possible and get out from under $18,000 yearly interest. If the bonds run their course the interest will cost the city some $180,000, Mr. McMath pointed out, indicating that sum could be well spent elsewhere.

Pay-As-Go Possible

He questioned and was assured by Auditor Jewell that in its present condition the city could operate on a "pay-as-you-go" plan.

Various other phases of the audit were discussed but the council took no action.

Mayor Wilson told the group that the city now has a building on its hands but prospects were good to either lease or sell. He was referring to the building which was underwritten by the city for Benny Bender operating as the Hope Manufacturing Co., in the sum of $12,000. The plant paid three months rent or $450, then moved out. The council took the action when told by various businessmen that it was either furnish the building or the plant would leave. It left anyway. However, all parties concerned seemed to think the city

Hensel Backed by Wilson in McCarthy Fuss

By HERBERT FOSTER

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson today emphatically backed H. Struve Hensel against "misconduct" charges filed by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the latest army-McCarthy dispute development.

Wilson told a news conference that Hensel, assistant defense secretary is an honest man. Them without drawing any specific examples, he said the McCarthy-army controversy reminds him of the political maximum "If you opponent accuses you of being a liar, you don't deny it. You call him a horse thief."

He said the dispute is making it hard for him to recruit high ranking civilian employees because they fear they will be "worked over unfairly."

Wilson described Hensel at a news conference as a "competent, honest man." He said that if he did not believe that, Hensel "would not be in his present assignment."

Asked whether he agreed with McCarthy's charges of "misconduct and law violations," Wilson said, "no."

Asked whether Hensel masterfully, as the Wisconsin Republican charged, Wilson said "of course not."

Witness Says Dickenson Attacked Sick

By HERB ALSCHULL

WASHINGTON (UP) — An ex-prisoner-of-war said today Cpl. Edward S. Dickenson pushed a sick POW down some stairs after the ailing man had asked Dickenson for food.

This incident was described by Staff Sgt. John A. Davis of Niagara Falls, N. Y., who started a Dickenson with unmasked hate during his appearance in the witness chair. It was the third day of Dickenson's court-martial on charges of collaborating with the Chinese Communists while a POW in Korea.

Davis said Dickenson, 23, from Cracker's Neck, Va., worked at the Red POW camp at Pkoting along the Yalu river and "I saw him trade off chow for tobacco and candy."

At one point, Davis said he saw a sick POW go up to Dickenson and ask for chow. Dickenson said there was no more, I, personally, saw some chow in the chow pot."

The witness said there was "a little argument" and he saw Dickenson push the man down three stairs. "The man's legs were paralyzed for a day," Davis said.

Seek Uranium Near Spa Says Newspaper

LITTLE ROCK, — A Little Rock newspaper said today it has learned that the Atomic Energy Commission will begin prospecting for uranium deposit near Hot Springs next month.

The Arkansas Democrat said it was told of the search by a source at the state Capitol who declined use of his name.

In the published article, the newspaper said an airplane would be used in prospecting for uranium, which is necessary to the production of atomic energy.

It said that equipment similar to a Geiger counter will be suspended beneath an airplane to pick up radio-active impulses from the area covered. The sections of land showing possible deposits of uranium then will be mapped for a ground search.

The Democrat said its informant didn't know how large an area would be covered in the search. He declined to speculate on the prospects for finding uranium, the newspaper said.

If the commission carries out the hunt, it will be the first big survey for uranium in Arkansas.

Seven Killed in Crash of Flying Boxcar

GRANADA HILLS, Calif. (UP) — A C-119 Flying Boxcar which crashed into a steep ridge near here killing seven Air Force men apparently was lost in a dense fog as it groped its way toward a landing field, investigators said today.

The twin-engine cargo and troop transport exploded and burned on the fog-shrouded ridge yesterday while approaching Lockheed Air Terminal at Burbank for an instrument landing. All aboard — five crewmen and two passengers — were killed.

The plane was en route from Williams Air Force Base, Chandler, Ariz.

Flaming gasoline set fire to the brush-covered ridge at the scene of the crash, about four miles northeast of the normal approach line for the air terminal.

Ground crews and firemen said two of the victims were burned to death in the wreckage and the five others had been thrown clear by the explosion.

The victims were identified as: 1st Lt. Harry Maurer, pilot, Quakertown, Pa.

Capt. Marshall G. Coulter Jr., co-pilot, Grosse Point, Mich.

Condemned Man Plans a New Book

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UP) — Caryl Chessman, an ill-starred genius who turned to crime, leaped through a copy of this autobiography in death row today and said he was working on two other books.

He hasn't much time to finish them. Unless he is given a stay, Chessman dies in the California gas chamber May 14.

Chessman's publishers air-mailed him a copy of the book, "Cell 2445, Death Row." It is subtitled, "A Condemned Man's Own Story."

The book, published by Prentice-Hall, was originally scheduled for publication July 26, but was speeded up to come out before Chessman dies.

Chessman is rated by psychiatrists as the most brilliant man ever to enter San Quentin.

Chessman disclosed he is also at work on two other books about crime, prisons and society. Whether he will get to finish them remains to be seen.

He disclosed yesterday he has filed a petition with Gov. Goodwin J. Knight in another attempt to stave off execution for kidnapping, attempted rape and robbery.

In his book Chessman wrote: "His execution will deter no one. It will prove nothing. It will simply mean that he will be dead and that, in this case, the problem he typifies has been evaded."

GOP Women to Hold Workshop

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — More than 200 women Republicans have been invited to attend a two-day political workshop here Thursday and Friday.

Rockefeller Explains Medical Plan

FORT SMITH, (AP) — Multi-millionaire Winthrop Rockefeller yesterday presented to the Arkansas Medical Society his plan for bringing medical facilities to neglected areas of the state.

In closed session, Rockefeller explained the workings of his proposal which he has indicated he would finance. The section of one of this country's wealthiest families maintains an office at Little Rock and a farm near Morrilton.

Dr. Louis K. Hundley of Pine Bluff, chairman of the society, quoted the Standard Oil heir, as suggesting a survey of the state to determine where medical facilities are most needed.

An appointed medical advisory council and a social service committee would select the area and a doctor would be sent into the sector immediately.

Rockefeller ruled out any direct handout to the area, saying the people would be encouraged to use their own initiative to enlarge the plan to establishment of a hospital or clinic and to maintain doctor.

The University of Arkansas Medical School at Little Rock should be used to coordinate the program, Rockefeller said.

If the plan was found to be workable it would be extended to other deficient areas of the state, said Hundley. He added that it would be extended to other deficient areas of the state, said Hundley.

He added that it would be presented tomorrow to the House of Delegates of the Arkansas Medical Association meeting here.

Brownell Seeks Authority to Tap Wires

General Herbert Brownell, Jr., asked Congress today to give him unfettered authority to tap wires for evidence to prosecute spies and subversives.

In testimony before a Senate judiciary committee, he objected to provisions in a House-approved bill which would require him to get a court order to tap wires for evidence in the future.

The requirement he said might prove "so restrictive in practical operation as to be fatal to the primary objective of bringing out traitors to justice."

"It is, in my opinion," he said, "that the wiretap technique would be attended by greater secrecy, speed, and better supervision by congress if no court order was required."

The house bill, approved by a 377-10 vote, was a compromise between the administration's request for full control over wire-tapping and opponents' insistence on court procedure to prevent an infringement of private rights.

North Little Rock Girl Wins $1,000 Lion Oil College Scholarship

18-Year-Old Senior Makes Most of Last Chance To Enter; 15 Other Arkansas Winners Listed

When Patsy Lamb, 18-year-old senior at North Little Rock High School, realized she had only one more opportunity to enter a Lion Oil Student Essay Contest before she became ineligible by reason of graduation, she made a special effort to get in an entry. It carried off a $1,000 college scholarship. Essays in this contest were on the subject, "How My Favorite School Subject Can Influence My Future."

Patsy is active in school organizations, clubs and church work. She is news editor of the Hi-Comet, school paper; state treasurer of the Future Teachers of America; assembly chairman of the Student Council; reporter for the National Honor Society; treasurer of the student body; and president of the Baptist Youth Council. She plans to attend a girls' college, but has not yet decided which one.

Mrs. B. F. Allbright, Patsy's English teacher at North Little Rock High, spends about a week with her students discussing and studying the Lion Oil Essay Contests each year immediately after the essay subjects are announced. As teacher-sponsor of the winner, Mrs. Allbright received a $200 cash award. Mr. George E. Miller, principal, in accepting $100 to purchase books for the school library, praised the Lion Oil Scholarship Program for its stimulus to creative writing and thinking.

Ninety other high school students and their teacher-sponsors in three zones received $25 cash Merit Awards in this contest — the last Lion Oil contest of the current school year. Since 1950, Southern students, teachers and schools have been awarded 1,075 prizes worth more than $97,000.

to talk to you at cocktail parties, and not all of them are near-sighted — just strange.

"Street beggars, for some reason, avoid a man in a pink shirt — so you save money. Small children and prowling dogs are sometimes frightened away by my pink shirt, but that's all right with me. I like cats, and my two cats seem to prefer me in a pink shirt, particularly after twilight.

"I'll admit there was one disadvantage to my pink shirt at the start. Whenever the boss looked around the office for someone he could off load some of his own work on, there I sat — as conspicuous as the rear end of an elephant in a telephone booth. But then the boss thought a pink shirt himself, and now — wonder why? — everybody in the joint is wearing one.

"If I wanted to catch his eye now, I'd have to grow a beard."

Well, I'm reconciled to wearing a pink shirt, too, and I will — come the next blinding fog.

The point I want to make, men, is this: It is time for American men to put their foot down and say firmly: "Women, this far and no farther. Hold Enough!"

While there is nothing wrong with pink shirts in themselves, they are another step in woman's steady march to power over the prostrate male.

A husband today rarely tells his wife what she should wear. His influence is purely negative. He usually says only, "Well, dear, that is something that is nice, but it isn't for you."

But since a wife now buys most of her husband's clothing, or is the voice of decision, her influence is overwhelmingly positive. She says, "This is what I bought for you, Buster. Quit crying. Put it on. Mrs. Jones bought one just like it for her husband and he looked real cute in it."

That is why I feel that today the average man more and more is dressing, not by his own standards, but by one or two standards:

1. By the way his wife thinks she would like to look — if she were a man.

2. By the way some neighbor's wife dresses her husband. Since a husband can't control his own wife's opinions of what she would wear if she were his six — and since he has even less influence over the ideas of his neighbor's wife — I think it is time men ought to make a grab to retain their old authority.

I don't say woman's place is only in the kitchen, although it is still nice to catch one by surprise there. But I do say it is high time for men's clothing stores to hang out a sign saying: "For men only."

quest of the French government. The parachute troops are being flown from France to Indochina in C-124 Globemasters. The Douglas planes belong to the Air Force actual Command. They will return to home bases in the United States, the Air Force said.

The troops are to be landed in non-combat areas. Planes piloted by French airmen or American civilians will shuttle them to the besieged fortress of Dien Bien Phu in northwest Indochina. Rains were upsetting air operations there today.

The troops—number unspecified but believed to total at least 1,000—were flown from Paris' big Orly Airfield yesterday. At last word they had not yet reached Indochina.

It was learned the two statements were aimed at European fears—fanned by Soviet propaganda—that the United States is determined to block any kind of negotiated settlement on Indochina at next week's momentous Geneva conference.

Foreign diplomats were welcomed the conciliatory words. There were not unduly optimistic, however, about the chances of getting a settlement agreeable to both the United States and the Communists.

Nixon declared that Dulles would "stand in opposition to any settlement which means surrender in Indochina" at Geneva. He warned that Indochina's loss could shift the world balance of power so that "the Kremlin would think it is time for a world war."

The administration's goal, said the vice president, is to try to hold Indochina's loss could shift the world balance of power so that "the Kremlin would think it is time for a world war."

The administration's goal, said the vice president, is to try to hold Indochina without committing U.S. troops, "if we can. He said the policy now being developed offers the best chance for doing this.

As he left for Europe and the Geneva meeting, Dulles said this country would seek a peace in Indochina "on honorable terms" but he bluntly charged the Communists with stepping up their "reckless" aggression.

Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.), chairman of the foreign relations committee, said in an interview today that he feels "there are good prospects for getting somewhere" at Geneva. He also was optimistic about the chances for allied unity.

Meanwhile: 1. Rep. Frederic R. Coudet, Jr. (R-N.Y.) said he has asked the House Armed Services committee to act on his bill to bar the President from committing U.S. troops

Parnell Hails Win as a Vote for President

By JAMES P. HACKETT

NEWARK, N. J. (AP) — Rep. William B. Widnall today hailed his Republican primary election victory over McCarthy booster J. Parnell Thomas as a vote of confidence in President Eisenhower rather than a test of McCarthyism.

"It was not a true test of McCarthyism," said Widnall, who defeated Thomas by a 35,000 to 5,000 vote in the stand-out congressional contest of yesterday's primary election in New Jersey.

"I think the results show that you need more than McCarthy as a platform on which to make a successful run," he said in a victory statement. He said he thought pro-McCarthy sentiment had fallen off recently.

Thomas, who had served seven terms in Congress before he was jailed in 1949 for payroll padding, had campaigned as a "1,000 percent" supporter of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.).

Widnall indicated the record Thomas carried into the election, rather than his support of McCarthy, hurt him at the polls in the state's mostly rural 7th District, traditionally Republican.

"I campaigned as a supporter of President Eisenhower and I believe the vote reflects confidence in what he has been doing," Widnall said.

Dulles Arrives in Paris for Conference

PARIS (AP) — U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles arrived here today to attend the meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and to consult with Western allies on strategy for the Geneva conference.

He was greeted at the airport by French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault who will be his guest at a private dinner this evening when they will review the Indochinese question and other problems coming up at Geneva.

Dulles told newsmen Friday's NATO meeting is of "special significance" for one of its purposes is to take notice of the fact that five years ago this month the North Atlantic Treaty was signed. That was an historic event.

"In the past five years," Dulles said, "we have made impressive progress in translating the symbolic act of banding together in the midst of a common danger into the reality of an effective common defense. Of equal importance is the habit of continuance—I could truthfully say—daily consultation in the Council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

Dulles said Friday's meeting would be a continuation of that process of consultations in fashion, he added, the countries would be able to understand each other's problems. "On this understanding said, 'on a common basis, future of all of us depends. Dulles made no mention of talks he planned to have in on the Geneva conference.

JAYNE'S P-W
KILL PIN-WORMS
(You may have them and not know it)
Fidgeting, nose-picking and a long, thin, white, worm-like pinworm are signs of Pinworms. These parasites that medical experts say infect one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it. To get rid of Pinworms, there must not only be killed but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:
First—a scientific coating that dissolves in the stomach, before they die. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredients work right to work—kill Pinworms quickly and easily.
Don't take chances with the dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pinworms, ask your doctor for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge. The signally easy-to-take tablets are tested by famous Dr. D. Jayne, Son, specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years.

Williams Starts Batting Practice

BOSTON (AP) Ted Williams, ahead of schedule as his broken collarbone continues its rapid healing, starts regular batting practice tomorrow after finding he can belt the ball out of the park.

The Boston Red Sox slugger started hitting the ball a little yesterday as a part of a 90 minute workout in the sun at Fenway Park and before he was through he had deposited a pitch some 283 feet into the rightfield bullpen.

Hitters Now Seem to Be in Nat'l Loop

By BEN PHLEGAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

What did the National League hitters learn in spring training that their American League friends apparently overlooked?

This was becoming a vital question today after the second straight one-hitter in the junior circuit while the National League was going its slug-happy way with another 28-hit donnybrook.

Lefty Alex Kellner of the Philadelphia Athletics tamed the Washington Senators on one safety-Wayne Terwilliger's lonesome single into center field with two out in the eighth inning as the A's won 7-0.

On Monday Jim McDonald of the New York Yankees, a right-hander, subdued Boston with the exception of a single by Harry Agganis.

A big share of the National League fireworks has involved the St. Louis Cardinals. The Redbirds absorbed a 13-6 shellacking at the hands of the Cincinnati Redlegs last night and now have been battered for 60 runs in six games.

The battering hasn't been all one-sided. The Cardinals have averaged almost seven runs for each of the same half dozen contests.

For years the National League has been the pitchers' league. Castoffs from American League mound staffs have gone to big season in the National while the American has concentrated on hitting stars.

But this season the hits are coming off National League bats. The two contrasting contests yesterday were part of a curtailed five-game schedule. Philadelphia whipped Brooklyn 6-3 and New York defeated Pittsburgh 6-2 in the National League and Chicago beat Detroit 7-2 in the American.

Millwaukee and Chicago in the National were rained out. Kellner was breezing along toward the first no-hitter in Griffith Stadium since 1931 when Terwilliger, a .235 hitter, rapped one back through the middle.

"I didn't feel too bad," Kellner said. "You figure a feller is lucky to pitch a no-hitter."

Kellner walked three and struck out six. He had retired 15 men in a row before Terwilliger broke the string.

Fireballing Virgil Trucks picked up his first 1954 victory for the White Sox as he checked Detroit on six hits.

The Cardinals used five pitchers against the heavy-hitting Redlegs and none of them toiled with any success. Memo Luna, a $75,000 winter purchase, lasted only two thirds of an inning in his first starting role and was charged with the loss.

Venerable Preacher Roe made his first appearance of the season for the Dodgers but the Phillies were ready for him and sent him to the showers in less than five innings. The deciding blast was a mighty home run by Del Ennis with a man aboard.

The Giants picked on Pittsburgh rookie Nelson King for three runs in the eighth inning to give them a comfortable margin after building a 3-2 edge against Pa. LaPalme, who left for a pinch hitter.

The Verger Band Mother's Club will meet Wednesday night, April 21, at the regular meeting place. All members are urged to meet on time 7:30 p. m.

The Friendship Club will meet Wednesday evening, April 21, at the home of Mrs. Joe E. Mass. Time 7:30 p. m.

Mance Easter of Hope died at his home Monday, April 19. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Miss Adele White made a business trip to Texarkana on Monday April 19.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — A West Coast critic advises that Stan Hack will have to become a great deal tougher than he was as manager of the Los Angeles club if he is to succeed in his new job as overseer of the Chicago Cubs. Stan, he says, treated all his players as buddies out there and they loved him in return, but he doubts that such a benign policy will succeed in the majors.

The Yankees already have cropped one quick decision. They announced with the start of the season they would give each of their players $8 daily meal money while on the road, without the time-honored check singing privileges, but changed their minds in a hurry when they discovered some athletes were dining on hamburgers and pocketing the difference.

Howzat again department? Jim Hearn, Giants pitcher, explaining why he was stroked for a home run: "That was a bad pitch, a chump. It was bad because I had given him the same pitch on the ball before."

The most popular gag of the young season is a pseudo-serious reference to Pittsburgh's "great $24,000 infield," the point being that each member of Branch Rickey's youthful 14 quartet is believed to be drawing the minimum big league salary of $8,000. The Mahatma has never believed in spoiling promising young ballplayers.

No writer who interviewed Bucky Harris down South believed the popular Washington manager when he said he would play Roy Sievers in left field even if the effects of his shoulder operation forced Sievers to throw balls in side-arm to his shortstop for the relay home. But Sievers is out there now and doesn't appear to be hurting the Senators. "They seldom throw anybody out from left field anyway," Bucky philosophizes.

Travelers Jump on Memphis

By The Associated Press

For a team that has won only four games this season, the seventh place Mobile Bears certainly have scored a healthy helping of runs.

The Bears blasted out a 15-11 victory over New Orleans last night, bringing their total runs for the season to 73, an average of almost seven per game. Little Rock, with the same number of runs, and Atlanta with only 61, have packaged them into eight victories and a tie for first place.

Home runs by Dick Teed and Ray Shearer sparked the Bears to a seven-run outburst in the seventh overturn in the seventh after the Pels had taken a scoring spree in the top of the seventh. Bill Kerr also homered for Mobile.

Danny Murtaugh sent in seven pitchers in an effort to outsize the Bears' booming bats.

Little Rock's 17-hit attack and a sloppy performance by Memphis gave the Travs a 17-3 victory over the Chicks. Chattanooga ended Nashville's two-game victory string with a 5-4 triumph and Atlanta nipped Birmingham 2-1 in a pitchers' duel.

Stanky, Hemus Draw Fines
ST. LOUIS, (AP) Manager Eddie Stanky of the St. Louis Cardinals said last night he was fined $100 and utility infielder Solly Hemus $50 for their part in a wrangle with umpires at Chicago Sunday.

Half of Stanky's fine and all of the levy against Hemus was charged to misconduct when they argued about a call that changed Stan Musial's apparent run-scoring double into a foul ball. The other $50 fine against Stanky was for remaining in the runway of the dugout after being ejected from the game with Hemus.

Kansas Baseballers Kick Porkers
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) Arkansas lost a ninth inning rally as Hutchinson, Kan., defeated the college players, 9-7, in an exhibition baseball game here yesterday.

With two out in the ninth, the Razorbacks loaded the bases but the Western Association club's Mike Sotelo struck out Francis Long to win the game.

Far U. S. Will Go Is Question

JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The most significant question at this time in American history—how far the country will go to keep the Communists out of the United States—was answered by the Eisenhower administration.

Secretary of State Dulles, after a long delay, avoided a reply to this question when the United States troops in Indochina if the Communists there, the States would be obliged to American soldiers to carry out the mission.

In the statement in response to a question following an official talk to the American Newspaper Editors, Dulles said that the circumstances, supporting his remark did not identify Nixon as the man who made it late he was so Nixon statement caused controversy, particularly among members of Congress. The State Department issued a statement of its own explaining the circumstances of a last resort seemed highly unlikely.

The department meant was that the French might be the fight.

The most significant part of the department explanation was that it didn't say at all: It said Nixon was wrong nor American troops would never be sent into Indochina.

And it recalled that Dulles March 29 said this country had to take great risks to Indochina and Southeast Asia the Communists.

He told newsmen yesterday, though it unlikely there was possibility of U. S. going into Indochina. He said it would not happen.

Garnet Hornier of the Washington Evening Star asked: "Do you agree with Mr. Nixon in his statement of American troops to Indochina if necessary, a last resort, to save that area from Communist domination if the Communists pull out?"

He replied that Nixon had asked a hypothetical question and the French pulled out—off record and he wasn't going to answer a hypothetical question. Thus he avoided a answer. Nixon had expressed his personal opinion to the editors and was entitled to it.

Nixon and Dulles are both members of the National Security Council, the nation's top defense planning body. It is up to the President, Vice President, Secretary of Defense, Secretary of State, Director of Central Intelligence, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to make the most important decisions on defense, at home or abroad. Any big decision on Indochina would be worked out in the White House. It may have been expressing a personal opinion, as Dulles was. Or he may have thought, off record, as he thought, off record, a decision taken by the Council or at least discussed also possible the various administration statements on Indochina, articles from Dulles, and an attempt to sound out the reaction to going into Indochina.

A House Big Enough

Staring at Mrs. Dahlstrom's broad, rigid back, she vowed that she'd never let this woman force her to leave Tom.

THE STORY: After a surprise marriage, Tom Dahlstrom brings his bride Lenny, Nee Elaine Allen home to live with his mother on a Wisconsin farm. Lenny is terrified by the thought that Mrs. Dahlstrom, her mother-in-law, will not approve of the marriage.

Mrs. Dahlstrom took a deep breath and seemed to will her expression back to its normal dignity. Ignoring Elaine's outstretched hand she opened the door behind her and slowly moved inside to let her son and his wife enter the white, shiny kitchen.

As if it were something unclean Elaine hastily tucked her conspicuous hand into the pocket of her navy blue suit. The vague unwelcome feeling of guilt she had kept submerged in happier thoughts these past nine days exploded inside her. Sizzling like a rocket the guilt shot through her nerves. She began to tremble as, reluctantly, she moved away from Tom and edged into the kitchen. Timidly, she glanced up at him. Little by little she let the affection in his eyes wash away some of the feeling. Gradually her trembling ceased.

She forced herself to look at Mrs. Dahlstrom again. Her eyes were large and blue like Tom's and filled with the icy fire of indignant questions. She turned to Tom again. Although he grinned unhesitatingly at her he must have noticed the expression in his mother's eyes.

"We should have told you, Ma. But you'd have gone all out for a fancy affair with a satin dress and a cake six feet high. Lenny refused to let me pay for it," he explained.

"Therefore we spoke the fatal words before the Reverend Rev. Rovaag's brother. You know, the one who has a church in Bluff. Mound. Then" he paused and chuckled like a little boy pleased with his own cleverness, "my friend in Madison and I went up north, where we caught only three measly bass."

A hint of warmth had come into Mrs. Dahlstrom's eyes when Tom mentioned Rev. Rovaag's brother. Then her forehead creased and she swallowed hard before she rasped: "Then her forehead creased and she

"Tom didn't seem to notice that his mother's voice was harsh. "We sure did, he laughed and patted her shoulder affectionately. I get Lenny's things from the car, while you two begin to get acquainted."

As though telling her once more that everything was going to work out all right before he went out the door, he squeezed Elaine's arm confidently.

Moving over to the sink and picking up the potato peeler, Mrs. Dahlstrom spoke politely and tonlessly to Elaine: "Won't you sit down?"

There was really no harshness in her voice but the meaning Elaine read in her previous exclamation seemed to bound into all the corners and nooks of the kitchen and out again it filled Elaine like the wings of a hawk.

Only a minister could perform a "proper" wedding to dissolve such a wedding was a much more serious matter than to justify the indifferent phrases of a nurse of the peace. Would Tom's adored mother try it, anyway?

Tiny icicles of fear began to encrust Elaine's heart. Murmuring "Thank you," she sat down in one of the neat white chairs and listened to the fire crackling in the range. She wished some of the heat would creep into her. Staring at Mrs. Dahlstrom broad rigid back she vowed that she'd never, never let this woman force her to leave Tom.

Without turning around, Mrs. Dahlstrom inquired curtly, "How old are you?"

"I'm... I'm 22, Elaine stammered, furious with herself for sounding apologetic.

"Tom is 27, you know," the other woman pointed out. Her thoughts seemed to turn inward and she seemed quietly, "Mr. Dahlstrom and I were the same age. We knew each other from childhood. In fact, we grew up together." She paused a long moment. "You haven't known Tom very long, have you?"

She spoke almost mildly, but Elaine, with her acute awareness of how Mrs. Dahlstrom must feel toward her, sensed a far-reaching meaning in the question.

"I suppose one would say I really met Tom when I was a freshman at the university... before he left for the service. We... we corresponded," she replied. Then, inwardly reviling herself for her frankness, she went on, "When he was in Rudeville High, he didn't know I was alive. He was too busy to notice me." Elaine laughed awkwardly.

"Tom was a busy boy in high school," his mother acknowledged.

The simple statement of fact, accented with a mother's natural pride, shot a barrage of unpleasant thoughts into Elaine's unwilling mind. Sure, Tom was busy. With Four-H, glee club, baseball, basketball, but busiest chasing after Astrid Nelson. It couldn't have been all his mother's idea either. But who is thinking right now how much better it would have been if Tom had married Astrid. A girl his own age. Of the same background. Someone Tom grew up with, like Signe grew up with Torvald Dahlstrom. Tom's father.

The dim feeling of inferiority that had haunted her all her life began to wrap its tentacles around her heart, squeezing until she thought it would stop beating.

What would happen when Tom saw Astrid again? Would he see how beautiful she still must be? If he compared his new wife with Astrid how could he help but know his future handsomer could Astrid have been their mother?

Elaine rubbed her moist palms across her skirt. Why didn't Mrs. Dahlstrom turn around and look at her? Why must she methodically scrape those potatoes as though there wasn't another soul within miles?

The sound of Tom's footsteps on the porch was like a shaft of sunshine through a blackened sky. Jumping up, Elaine held the door open for him.

"Come, Lenny," he said, brushing past her, "I'll show you my room—our room, I mean." There was a touch of embarrassment in his grin. Elaine longed to fling her arms around him and let the feel of his big, powerful body urge away all the baffling emotions, that were tearing her apart.

"You'd better put the luggage in the big room, Tom," his mother ordered, spinning around. "My room."

They both looked at her. Elaine had the awful sensation that Mrs. Dahlstrom was choking back tears. Her lips were a tense line of blue. She refused to meet their eyes as she moved from the sink to inspect the contents of a pot of applesauce that had begun to teeter back and forth over the ridge of the stove lid. Picking up a spoon from the enamel shelf above the range she began to stir the sauce.

The movement seemed to relax her and a calmness came back into her voice. "I always said that when Tom got married that was to be his room." She paused a second and her voice became strangely gentle. "Torvald put those big windows in for me. I used like to lie there in bed in the morning for a few minutes and watch the sun rise over the forest."

Instinctively Elaine wanted to say something kind to Mrs. Dahlstrom. The lump that sprang to her throat stifled the words. Elaine wasn't the woman that Mrs. Dahlstrom had hoped would move into her house. Yet, uncompromising honesty kept her bound to her promise.

Tom set the suitcases on the floor and gently put his hand on his mother's erect shoulder. "Why don't you move back into the big room yourself?" he asked kindly.

"You'd enjoy the sunrise now as much as you did years ago."

"I'm too old to be climbing up and down stairs," she answered, shrugging his hand away. "Tiny pinpoints of fire sparked from her eyes when she looked at him and added tersely, "This is my house. You'll take the room I tell you."

Resignedly, Tom shook his head. "Okay, Ma. You're the boss. Then he picked up Elaine's bags and disappeared into the dining room.
